

Cyber Wellness Student Ambassador Programme (CWSAP) 2015 Conference — Parents Track

The Cyber Wellness Student Ambassador Programme (CWSAP) is a collaboration between the Ministry of Education (MOE) and the Media Development Authority (MDA) to engage student voice and promote cyber wellness peer advocacy.

A key highlight of this year’s conference is the Parents Track — where experts will provide parents with insights on how to raise children in the digital age.

About the Speakers

Farrell Nah

An alumnus of the Cyber Wellness Student Ambassador Programme, 17 year old Farrell mentors his juniors in developing programmes to address issues youths are facing today, such as cyber bullying, digital identity and online relationships. Farrell will provide insights into what youths and children are doing online and how parents can support or guide their children’s activities.

Edmund Tay

Edmund Tay, a father of three, is an award winning parent blogger who shares tips and stories on parenting on his personal blog, Ed Unloaded (www.EdUnloaded.com). Through his experiences and expertise in raising children in the digital age, Edmund gives valuable insights on how to raise resilient children who can thrive in the digital age.

Dr May O. Lwin

May O. Lwin is an associate dean and associate professor in the Wee Kim Wee School of Communication and Information, Nanyang Technological University. Dr Lwin’s research focuses on child and youth health and wellness. In particular she studies the effects of family and parental communication on child behaviours. Dr Lwin provides expert advice on how parenting styles influence children’s online activities.
